This week President Obama held a town hall meeting in Charlotte about economics and, while there, took a shot at Republican lawmakers and the Governor by saying the state needs to pay its teachers more. You'll hear some of the president's general remarks and how Gov. Pat McCrory responded to the teacher comments. One of the people who wants to replace the president was in Raleigh this week. You'll hear remarks from Texas Sen. Ted Cruz, who is seeking the GOP nomination for president. Then host Donna Martinez analyzes the comments made by the President and the senator with Carolina Journal Managing Editor Rick Henderson. And finally, Martinez talks about the latest polling data of North Carolina voters with Tom Jensen of Public Policy Polling.
