

{audio}files/preroll.mp3;files/News_Audio/2012/sgrthall012312.mp3{/audio}

Bob Hall, executive director of the non-profit Democracy North Carolina think tank, tells host Barlow Herget that the controversial Voter ID bill is still alive despite a gubernatorial veto and if overridden, it could affect up to 500,000 voters. Hall also explains the new boy in campaign financing, the Super PAC, and it's likely impact in North Carolina races.