RALEIGH, (SGRToday.com) - She's facing a primary fight for re-election, and now 2nd District Congresswoman Renee Ellmers has released her first television ad. The commercial is called "Fight" and will begin airing on both broadcast and cable, according to a campaign news release.

The ad will run through May 6, primary election day. A transcript of the ad shows it focuses on the most controversial issue of the past six years: the Affordable Care Act, commonly known as ObamaCare.

Ellmers faces fellow Republican Frank Roche in the primary. Roche's consistent campaign theme is that Ellmers is not conservative enough and is too close to the Republican establishment in Washington D.C.

Ellmers says she is an effective lawmaker who has established important working relationships with key members of Congress.
