RALEIGH, (SGRToday.com) - Gov. Pat McCrory will help educate the public about the $2 billion bond that will help fund educational facilities around the state, when he visits UNC School of the Arts Thursday.

The governor's public schedule shows a 1 p.m. stop at the college in Forsyth County. The event will take place in Watson Recital Hall on Waughtown Street.

Details about the bond can be found at connectnc.gov.

Voters will give a thumbs up or thumbs down to the project when it appears on the March 15 primary election ballot statewide.

A group opposed to the bond has formed: againstthebond.com.
