

{audio}files/preroll.mp3;files/Shows/2011/091211_SGR_Exclusive_Goodwin.mp3{/audio}

The state's Insurance Commissioner Wayne Goodwin tells host Barlow Herget that people are still calculating damages from Hurricane Irene, especially agricultural losses, and total losses will be more than $400 million. Goodwin credits North Carolina's experience with hurricanes for its aggressive public awareness and orderly response.