

By
Friday, 19 August 2011 06:00 -

{audio}files/preroll.mp3;files/Shows/2011/081911_Weekly_News_Review.mp3{/audio}

The three branches of government, legislature, executive and judicial, are all coming together in argument over budget cuts to early childhood education programs, Reporters Scott Mooneyham of the Capital Press Association, and SGRToday.com's Josh Ellis join host Barlow Herget to sort out the stories. And Republican Rep. Stephen LaRoque, a critic of people's reliance on government programs, defends his six-figure compensation from a non-profit he heads that administers loans financed by - you guessed it - government money.